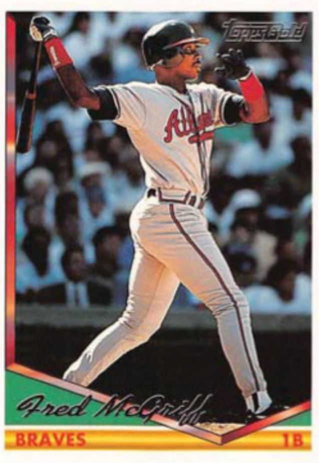
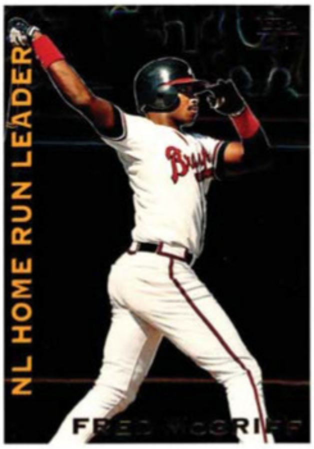
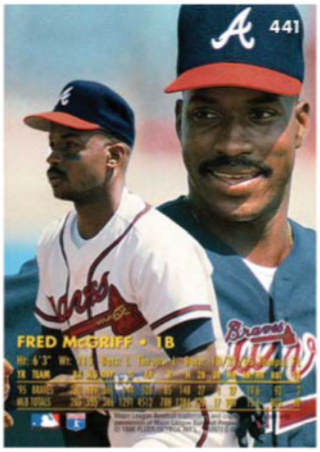
LEADING OFF | BY JEFF OWENS

Classy slugger Fred McGriff gets his due with Hall of Fame nod







Fred McGriff was already affectionately known as "Crime Dog" when he arrived in Atlanta on July 18, 1993.

His famous nickname came from ESPN's Chris Berman, who named him after "McGruff the Crime Dog," the animated bloodhound that protected neighborhoods by "taking a bite out of crime."

McGriff was traded from San Diego to Atlanta to protect young sluggers Ron Gant and David Justice and add a bit more bite to the Braves lineup.

He wasted no time filling that role, hitting a home run in his Braves debut. In 68 games in Atlanta, he slugged 19 home runs and drove in 55 runs to lead the Braves to their third straight NL West championship.

On Sept. 2 that year, McGriff strolled to the plate in the bottom of the seventh inning of a crucial game against San Francisco and calmy stroked a single to center to drive in the final run in a 5-3 win. Batting cleanup, he was 2-for-3 with an RBI, a run scored and a walk.

With Barry Bonds lurking in the opposing dugout, McGriff, like McGruff, protected his turf and helped his team secure another key victory.

I was covering the game that night for a North Carolina newspaper in the heart of Braves Country and knew I needed to talk to McGriff. He had already slugged 246 career home runs and at age 30 had helped solidify a Braves lineup that was going to be a contender for a while.

With a crowd of reporters gathered around his locker, the unassuming, soft-spoken McGriff was as accommodating as always. Unlike the surly slugger in the opposing clubhouse, he was friendly, polite and a pleasure to talk to. He was happy to be in Atlanta, he said, enjoyed mentoring the team's young players and prophetically predicted the Braves would soon win a World Series.

Two years later, he helped fulfill that prediction, launching a memorable home run off Orel Hershiser in Game 1 of the 1995 World Series to lead Atlanta to its first championship.

On Dec. 4, McGriff finally received his due, being elected to the Baseball Hall of Fame. He was an unanimous choice by the Contemporary Baseball Era Players Committee, which ironically included Hall of Famer and former Braves teammate Greg Maddux.

McGriff's career numbers — 493 home runs, 1,550 RBI — stack up against many Hall of Fame sluggers. He's one of just four players in MLB history to lead both leagues in home runs and his 52.6 WAR is higher than Orlando Cepeda, Jim Rice and Ted Simmons.

A five-time all-star, McGriff swatted 20 home runs in his first full season with the Toronto Blue Jays and never slowed down, hitting 30 or more in each of the next seven seasons. He hit 30 or more dingers 10 times, including 30 at age 38 for the Cubs.

As a longtime Braves fan, it was nice seeing McGriff join Maddux, Tom Glavine, John Smoltz and Chipper Jones in the Hall of Fame. McGriff was elected not just because of his impressive stats but because of the way he carried himself and played the game.

"He was a great teammate that played the game right and showed up every day to play," Smoltz told MLB.com.

The well-respected "Crime Dog" was elected to the Hall of Fame by a committee of his peers, a committee that, ironically, passed over Bonds, a controversial figure that did not play the game the right away.

Finishing just behind McGriff in committee voting was another well-respected Braves star known for his big bat and classy demeanor. Hopefully one day, Dale Murphy will join him in Cooperstown.

How a hobby friendship led to a new podcast

We all meet a variety of different people during our hobby journey, some online and some in-person.

Occasionally there's a person you really click with, like you've known them for many years. For me, that guy is Danny Black.

I met Danny in person at the 2021 National Sports Collectors Convention in Chicago. He was a listener of the podcast, he introduced himself and we talked for a bit. Soon we struck up a friendship and those conversations continued. They centered on the hobby, content creation, sports and life.

In getting to know Danny better, we realized we shared many parallels, including the fact that we both became card dealers at a very young age. And while we root for rival football teams — Danny pulls for the Ravens, while I am a Steelers fan — we do have similar perspectives on the hobby and the many facets of it. Even when we have opposing views, the mutual respect makes discussing those differences interesting, fun and no one gets hurt.

Danny's interesting background is not your average bio. He's worked for both the Atlanta Braves and Baltimore Orioles, including during Cal Ripken Jr.'s retirement ceremony, which he was involved in. He went full time in the hobby in 2020 but started as a broker in 2016. He's done radio shows in Baltimore since 2020 and started writing for Baltimore's Press Box magazine this year.

Our histories have led to many great conversations.

When Sports Card Nation received a main stage slot at The National, I knew I wanted to share that 30 minutes with people who love the hobby as I do and have its best interests at heart. I asked three friends to join me as co-hosts — Danny and Oz & Tony from Cousins Collectibles. Those 30 minutes flew by but all on that panel and those watching enjoyed the genuine, honest and interactive conversation.

At the time of this writing, I've had more than 180 different people and personalities on the podcast during the first four years of the show. I appreciate everyone that has been a guest on the show. In getting to know Danny, I learned that he brought a lot of experience and knowledge to his content. I invited him to be part of our live video conglomerate podcast "Hobby Hotline," which features almost 20 different hobby content creators, including Dr. James Beckett.

However, it was during those off-air conversations when we both realized it would be fun to collaborate on some new content. We also knew we wanted to do it differently. So, we decided to do a bi-monthly show that not only touches on the hobby but also tackles hot sports topics and even sports betting and fantasy sports as well. Something tells me some everyday life stuff will seep in there as well.

The name of the new show is "Card Mensches," with a nod to our Jewish heritages. Twice a month, it will go live with podcast audio being uploaded a few days after. It will launch on Dec. 9 (live) and Dec. 12 (audio) on the Sports Card Nation YouTube channel and podcast platforms. I hope you join us. It should be interesting to say the least.

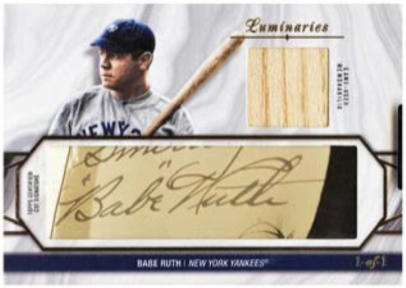
BABE RUTH A CARDBOARD LUMINARY

FAREWELL TO TWO OLD FRIENDS, STARS



Luminaries
Sincerely Babe Ruth
BABE RUTH | NEW YORK YANKEES®

BABE RUTH
NEW YORK YANKEES® • OUTFIELDER
You have just received a
CUT SIGNATURE RELIC CARD
from 2022 Topps Luminaries Baseball.
Topps certifies the authenticity of the cut signature found in this card.
The relic contained in this card is not from any specific game, event or season.
Topps

A luminary, according to Merriam-Webster, is "a person of prominence or brilliant achievement." And no one was more, er, "luminarian" than Babe Ruth.

As such, he served as an ideal subject for a 1-of-1 insert card in Topps' 2022 Luminaries set.

The card in question turned up on eBay and sold in December for $17,600. It bears a well-preserved cut signature from the Bambino along with a slice of a game-used bat. The reverse of the card vouches for the autograph: "Topps certifies the authenticity of the cut signature found in this card."

However, it also offers a disclaimer regarding the bat sliver, which doesn't have a connection to Ruth: "The relic contained in this card is not from any specific game, event, or season."

But let's be honest: It's the authenticated signature that matters. To that end, it's a clean, bold, well-preserved autograph, with the bottom of the word "Sincerely" visible just above Ruth's sig.

FAREWELL, OLD FRIENDS

On Nov. 30, pro sports lost two high-impact players: Hall of Fame hurler Gaylord Perry and should-be football Hall of Famer John Hadl, a top quarterback in the old AFL and several years into the AFL/NFL merger.

Never mind Perry's well-covered spitball. He was the ultimate warrior — one of those tough-as-nails guys who never wanted to come off the mound. In 22 seasons, he threw 303 complete games while compiling a 314-265 record. He struck out 3,534 batters and finished with a 3.11 ERA.

1962 ROOKIE
GAYLORD PERRY
S.F. GIANTS

JOHN HADL
SAN DIEGO CHARGERS

In the hobby, Perry's rookie card, a 1962 Topps, has long been an undervalued item. In the months prior to his passing, we saw two PSA 8 specimens of the card sell for prices of $1,377 and $1,349. Since his death, amazingly, we haven't seen any sell for higher prices than those.

Hadl is even more of a bargain. You can find his rookie card, a 1964 Topps, for less than $50, even if in 7 or 8 condition.

In college, Hadl was a multi-position star at Kansas. He went on to play in the AFL and NFL for 16 years, mostly with the Chargers. His final stats included 244 touchdown passes and 16 rushing TDs. He also produced 33,503 yards passing, teaming up with Lance "Bambi" Alworth to form one of the league's most entertaining connections.

CRIME PAYS

Well, no, crime doesn't pay. Unless your crime was knocking baseballs around MLB parks for two decades, as Fred "Crime Dog" McGriff did. Baseball's newest Hall of Fame inductee had a worthy career: a .284 average with 493 homers and 1,550 RBI.

In the hobby, McGriff is a steal. We saw a PSA 10-grade 1986 Leaf rookie card of McGriff sell for $1,237 in December — and that was an outlier. Three days later, another PSA 10 of that McGriff rookie card got away for just $539 on four bids.

Those prices do represent an upswing,

ON THE OUTSIDE LOOKING IN

MICKEY MANTLE
Mickey Mantle

A 1952 Topps Mickey Mantle card graded 2 landed just outside our Top 10 chart, selling for $21,500. Was that price a bargain, even for a 2-grade card? It may well have been.

The grading company was WTP, a far lesser-known firm than PSA, BGS and SGC, among other commonly used services. We've seen Mantle Topps rookies with a 2 from PSA, for example, go for $30,000 to $40,000 or more. And if you watch enough of these auctions, you see a pattern where grading and authentication from one of the leading services produces a premium at auction.

Here's the full "next 10" list:

- $22,277 on 49 bids: 1948 Leaf Jackie Robinson (PSA 6)
- $22,200 on 48 bids: 2003-04 Bowman Chrome LeBron James Refractor, #118/300 (BGS 10)
- $21,500 on 18 bids: 1952 Topps Mickey Mantle (WTP 2)
- $20,433 on 39 bids: 2022 Panini Prizm FIFA World Cup Lionel Messi, #6/10 (ungraded)
- $19,655 on 40 bids: 1909-11 T206 Piedmont Ty Cobb, green portrait (SGC 4)
- $18,900 on 11 bids: 2019-20 Panini National Treasures Ja Morant, #10/99, auto patch (BGS 9.5, auto 10)
- $17,600 on 28 bids: 2022 Topps Luminaries Babe Ruth, #1/1, auto (ungraded)
- $16,600 on 63 bids: 1986-87 Fleer Michael Jordan (PSA 9)
- $16,059 on 65 bids: 1948 Bowman Stan Musial (PSA 8)

PS: Speaking of Mantle, it's worth noting that two different cards of The Magnificent Yankee pushed our "next 10" list. One of them was a 1959 Topps card that brought $15,145 on 32 bids. It was in Near-Mint condition, having been graded PSA 8.5. The other was a 1951 Bowman Mantle graded PSA 3. It fetched $15,107 on 39 bids.

JUDGE MEMORABILIA: WILL IT ALL RISE?

In the days following Aaron Judge's record-setting nine-year, $360 million contract with the Yankees, there was no instant spike in eBay activity. That's no big surprise, considering spring training is still months away. But make no mistake: Judge collectibles went on a serious upswing during the 2022 campaign, and there's no reason to think it won't continue in that direction once he starts "upswinging" at MLB pitches again.

Meanwhile, sellers are primed. There are nearly 70,000 Judge items listed at eBay. And one of them belongs in our irregular "dream on" series: A seller is listing a 1-of-1 Judge rookie card with an autograph and a patch for (hold onto your hat) $2.994 million. The card is a 2015 Leaf Trinity insert that was graded BGS 9.

True, it's an autographed card. Yes, there's a patch in it — and not just any old patch. This one has the highly collectible "Logoman" patch sitting on top of a small piece of pinstriped uniform. And yes, as a one-of-a-kind item, its rarity gives it even more cache. But asking nearly $3 million is a stretch — by two zeroes and (probably) then some.

At press time, there were no bids dropped onto this auction with eight days to go.

PATRIOT PASSER

Speaking of 1-of-1 cards with appealing patches, here's a high-dollar one featuring a certain New England Patriots quarterback. But no, it's not Tom Brady. It's Mac Jones, who was featured on a 2021 Panini Chronicles "Timeless Treasures" card. It bears his autograph underneath a complete NFL logo shield patch.

The one-of-a-kind insert card drew four bids and reached $20,000 at the tail end of November.

STAR COLLECTOR

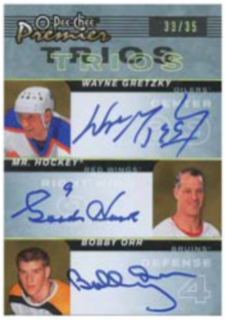
Still more patch appeal: An eBay seller got $6,766 on 29 bids for a signed 2007-08 Upper Deck Black card of LeBron James. This beauty, one of only 25 made, features a star-shaped Logoman patch.

The reverse side makes it clear that the Logoman piece wasn't related to James: "This patch has never been worn by a player in a game or event."

The autograph, though, is authentic. UD notes it was "signed in the presence of a company representative or certified as to its authenticity by LeBron James."

HOCKEY HEROES X 3



Maybe the best deal on all of eBay in the past month was an O-Pee-Chee hockey card that featured autographs of not one, not two, but three all-time heroes of the ice: Wayne Gretzky, Gordie Howe and Bobby Orr.

The "Premier Trios" card was included in O-Pee-Chee's 2007-08 set. Only 35 were made, so arguably, it should be a higher-valued card than what we saw on eBay in December, when #33 of 35 sold for just $5,123 on 31 bids. It's a treasure of a piece, with clean and bold autographs of those three legends.

FOND MEMORIES

Remembering sports stars and legends who passed away in 2022

1962
ROOKIE
PERRY
S.F. GIANTS

Hall of Fame pitcher Gaylord Perry was one of the most accomplished and colorful pitchers in baseball history, winning two Cy Young Awards and intriguing hitters and baseball fans alike with his mastery of the spitball.

Perry died on Dec. 1 at age 84.

A native of Williamston, N.C., Perry was the first player to win the Cy Young in both leagues, capturing the top pitching award for the Cleveland Indians in 1972 and San Diego Padres in 1978.

A five-time All-Star, Perry pitched for eight major league teams from 1962-83. He finished his career with a 314-255 record with 3,554 strikeouts. He was elected to the Baseball Hall of Fame in 1991.

The Texas Rangers, whom Perry played for twice, called him “a fierce competitor every time he took the ball.”

Perry was perhaps best known for mastering the infamous spitball, which he wrote about in his 1974 autobiography “Me and the Spitter.” Perry wrote that he learned the pitch while playing for the San Francisco Giants in 1962-63 and threw it for the first time in a game against the New York Mets in 1964. He stopped throwing it in 1968, he wrote, after MLB ruled that pitchers could no longer touch their fingers to their mouth, opting to use other foreign substances like petroleum jelly.

Perry was one of many current and former sports stars who passed away in 2022, including fellow Hall of Fame pitcher and Cy Young winner Bruce Sutter and Hall of Fame baseball broadcaster Vin Scully.

The sports world and collecting community also lost NBA legend Bill Russell, a 12-time All-Star, five-time league MVP and winner of 11 NBA championships with the Boston Celtics. Russell, who passed away on July 31 at age 88, was also a giant in the sports collectibles world. His personal memorabilia collection sold for more than $7.4 million last year, highlighted by a game-worn jersey from the 1969 NBA Finals for $1.1 million. His 1957 Topps rookie card sold for a record $630,000 in 2021.

Here's a look at other notable sports stars and personalities who passed away in 2022:

- Basketball Hall of Famer Bill Russell, 88.
- NFL player, head coach and nine-time Super Bowl participant Dan Reeves, 77
- Major league pitcher Larry Bittner, 75.
- Major league pitcher Jim Corsi, 60.

Ups AND Downs

RECORD SALE, VOLATILE MARKET HIGHLIGHT TOP SPORTS COLLECTIBLE STORIES OF 2022

Sports collectibles exploded onto the national sports scene in 2021, making headlines with a booming trading card market and unprecedented growth, demand and prices.

Though the market softened a bit in 2022, it was a still a big year for the hobby, with more record sales and industry-changing developments.

Here's a look at some of the top stories and biggest developments of 2022:

BIG SALE

MICKEY MANTLE

$12.6 million
1952 Topps Mickey Mantle, SCG 9.5

Historic sale by Heritage Auctions was the first eight-figure sale of a sports card and broke the all-time record by $5.4 million.

BOMBSHELL

Playoff Contenders 2000
Championship Rookie Ticket
Brady
MIKE TROUT
FLEER
MICHAEL JORDAN
BULLS • GUARD-FORWARD

That loud boom you heard was the end of the historic sports card boon. The explosive growth of 2020-21 came to a screeching halt with a dramatic decline in modern sports cards. Consider the drop in prices of these iconic cards:

2000 Playoff Contenders Championship Ticket Tom Brady Rookie Auto BGS 9

RECORD	2022 HIGH	2022 LOW
$3.1M	$100,000	$40,000

2009 Bowman Chrome Mike Trout Rookie BGS 9.5

BIG CHANGE

The National Sports Collectors Convention will be under new management beginning in 2024 with promoters Joe Drelich, Brian Coppola and Jim Ryan of JBJ Corporation taking over the show. The 2024 event will move to Cleveland.

BAD GUYS

FBI Special Agent Brian Brusokas warned in early 2022 that record growth would attract unscrupulous characters. He was right.

- A prominent dealer was robbed of $87,000 of sports cards at The National.
- A GTS Distribution warehouse in Southern California was robbed of several cases of high-end football and basketball cards.
- Numerous card shops were victims of break-ins and theft.
- Multiple breakers were accused of scamming participants in live breaks, including on-stage at The National.

CARD SHOP CONCERNS

With Fanatics cutting out distributors, retail outlets concerned about future sports card model

Sports card shops like Sports Zone Toys & Comics in Sunbury, Pa. get most of their product from wholesale distributors.

A few of the early dominoes in the new world order of sports cards and collectibles started to fall shortly after The National in Atlantic City in late July.

The largest sports card distributor on the planet, GTS Distribution, was informed by Topps, the most iconic name in the history of sports cards, that it would lose its license to distribute Topps cards at the end of year.

On the surface, this was not necessarily a good or bad development for the hobby, but it was huge news nonetheless.

Brick-and-mortar card shops such as ours here in Central Pennsylvania have seen the writing on the wall for quite some time, but now it is being carved in stone. While we continue to stay the course, it's impossible to avoid some of the seismic shifts in the hobby.

Jason Bailets, the owner of Sports Zone Toys & Comics in Sunbury, Pa., the shop where I have worked for four-plus years, has been in business as a full-time card shop for nearly 18 years.

“It's definitely an interesting time to be a part of a hobby,” Bailets says. “We [card shop owners] have dealt with distributors for over 30 years. It will be interesting to see if Fanatics cuts that layer out of the equation altogether.

“We are curious to see if they also cut card shops out of the equation and sell direct to consumer or offer products to customers at the same price point they do to card shops. This could be great or it could be a negative change for the hobby. We still have to wait and see as more details come out.”

When word of the GTS development leaked out, Topps issued a statement saying it was prioritizing working directly with hobby shops “and a broad array of customers to ensure they have better access to the latest and best products and promotions.”

“As part of that effort and to better serve the hobby and its growth, we will make strategic adjustments to our product allocation and distribution channels to create the best experience for all collectors,” a Topps statement said.

GTS had little to say on the development, saying only that it would continue to work with Topps on retail and international efforts.

With some wholesale card distributors being cut out, one thing is clear — Fanatics, which owns Topps, is going in a different direction. That direction continues to appear to be cutting out the middlemen. If the ultimate goal is direct-to-consumer distribution, this could be a huge step in that direction.

Fanatics’ business model has always been direct-to- consumer and they have cut out layers in other business ventures, so it should come as no surprise if they do indeed move in that direction.

Fanatics has yet to release any details about its distribution plans, but it has said for months that it plans to work closely with hobby and card shops.

“Card shops are 1A and 1B, it’s where the customers are, and that’s the most important thing, 100 percent,” Josh Luber, a co-founder and strategic advisor for Fanatics Collectibles, told SCD at the National Sports Collectors Convention in July.

After talking to many hobby shops, it appears that GTS has not made many friends in recent months and years. In our personal experience at the shop, we've known GTS to offer a limited amount of product during the weekly release, and then magically have product at, you guessed it, a higher price and in large quantities after the fact … at full market price.

We thought this might be a scenario only seen by the little guys, but after speaking to Nathan Burns, who runs one of the most successful card shops and breaking businesses in the country in Grand Slam Collectibles in Murfreesboro, Tenn., it appears that has been GTS' M.O. across the board.

"The thing is, I am a retailer," Burns states. "A distributor should be a distributor. A retailer should be a retailer. I am all for Topps making the lion's share of the profit, but at the end of the day, I can't buy from my rep at a higher price than Blowout is charging. I would rather not have it on my shelf.

"Again, no hard feelings with GTS. They are a well-run business. I'm not knocking them. … [But] I can only do it if there is a reasonable profit from the distributor to the end user."

The price gouging and ongoing concern and frustration over product allocation are both real.

"I did a lot more business with GTS three or four years ago when I first started," Burns says. "Over the last several years my allocations have went down so much I don't even really check my allocations anymore. They just send me what they send me.

"I have a direct account with Topps. They have been amazing. They let you build through time. That is the way it should be. In turn, I take all of the products they offer. That is fair to them. I shouldn't not take Garbage Pail Kids when they are letting us make money on Bowman and Definitive and all of those things. It should be a win-win situation."

On the surface, it makes sense for a new card company to look to recoup their investment by cutting out some unnecessary layers between the manufacturer and the end customer, but in doing so in such a small, tightly knit space, it may do more harm than good and present problems not foreseen by Fanatics. Doing so in an industry such as sports cards would eliminate some key layers and components of the overall experience.

While the relationship between distributors and shop owners is important, the bond between card shops and customers is imperative.

Fanatics seems to understand that.

"[Card shops] are part of the customer experience," Luber said. "With trading cards, you need that asset, that hobby shop owner, the dealer, that interaction."

WHAT ABOUT BREAKERS?

One of the biggest pieces of that experience for many collectors is the fan- and user-friendly box breaks. That wildly popular and relatively new layer of the hobby experience is also potentially threatened if Fanatics chooses to create a new distribution network.

"If it goes straight direct-to-consumer down the road, they are missing the entire point of the boom," Burns says. "The boom wasn't about card shops. The boom wasn't about Topps or Panini. The boom was solely because of breakers going online. It was a joint effort by hundreds of us. It wasn't one person that did this. We started covering new areas. Facebook is where we made our hay. Nobody was on Facebook back then. That was where middle-aged guys who had a little extra money to burn were at.

"My customers want to be entertained. They are working during the day. At 7:00 at night, they want to have dinner, put the kids down, and then turn on and be entertained with somebody they feel like is one of their buddies. I feel like card shops that break and breakers were the boom. I think those guys deserve some level of product to keep this thing going."

Burns says eliminating breakers would have a profound impact on the hobby.

"If you think you are going to cut out all of these great breakers that have broken product through the years and the end user is just going to buy it, the demand might not be there anymore if the community isn't sitting around cheering when you do a break," he said.

"If they went down that road of direct-to-customer, what they aren't calculating is the value of the entertainment, the value of the knowledge. … If we are not careful, guys wearing suits who are crunching numbers are just looking at numbers and that's it. That is my fear, that it's all going to be about getting things to the end user and it will flame out."

One of the biggest unanswered questions and concerns heading into 2023 is whether card shops and breakers will still have a spot at the table or will they be the next to go.

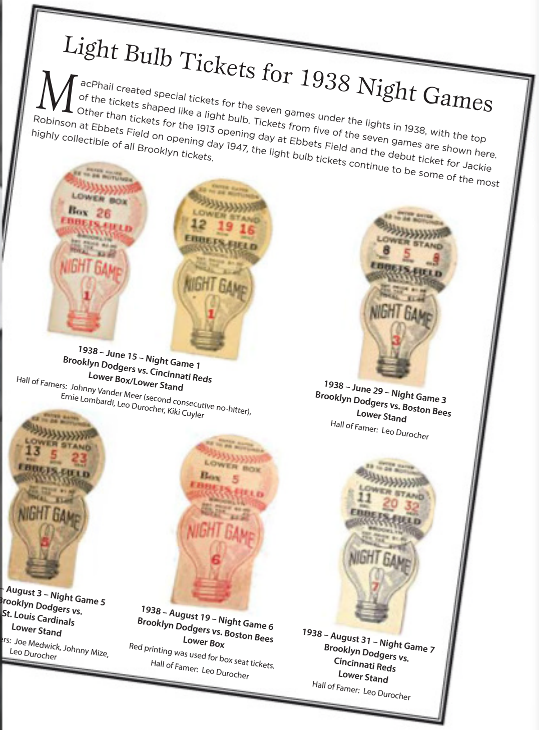
This coffee-table size book was 10 years in preparation.



Light Bulb Tickets for 1938 Night Games

MacPhail created special tickets for the seven games under the lights in 1938, with the top of the tickets shaped like a light bulb. Tickets from five of the seven games are shown here. Other than tickets for the 1913 opening day at Ebbets Field and the debut ticket for Jackie Robinson at Ebbets Field on opening day 1947, the light bulb tickets continue to be some of the most highly collectible of all Brooklyn tickets.

END OF AN ERA

1981-82 Topps Basketball ended company's long run, but jumpstarted new generation of hoops stars and cards

BY JAMES MERCER

The 1981-82 Topps Basketball set was the company's last hoops series for a decade.

As most sports card collectors know, a 1980 federal court decision (Fleer v. Topps and MLBPA) ended the long monopoly of the Topps Gum Company, leading to the issuance of baseball cards by Topps competitors, most notably Fleer and Donruss.

For whatever reason, no other company immediately challenged Topps' similar dominance in basketball cards. So in the fall of 1981, for the 13th year and final time for a decade, Topps and only Topps released a card set featuring players of the National Basketball Association.

Strangely, Topps choose to end an era of professional basketball cards that had begun in the 1969-1970 season. Despite the absence of any competition, the 1981-82 set would be the last basketball cards issued by Topps until 1992.

Luckily for collectors, the void was filled by Star Company beginning with the 1983-84 season, Fleer in 1986-87 and NBA Hoops in 1989-90.

No official reason has ever been given by the bigwigs at Topps for terminating its 13-year run of basketball cards. One theory (my own) is that the previous year's set fell so flat that Topps decided in the latter part of 1981 to pull the plug on basketball cards after the last gasp of the 1981-82 set.

At the same time, a new era was beginning for the NBA. The league had hit a low point in the late 1970s. It was so bad that the NBA Finals were not even broadcast live, but on tape delay at 11:30 at night.

Fortunately, two saviors arrived in the fall of 1979 to lead the NBA to heights of popularity unseen in league history. Their names were Larry Bird and Magic Johnson, and they were soon joined by a third phenomenon named Michael Jordan. The three helped the league attain national and international popularity undreamed of prior to 1979. So Topps was in the strange position of ceasing production of NBA cards just when the market for them was expanding.

The 1981-82 set marked a return to conventional cards after the "so bad it has to be seen to be believed" 1980-81 set. Each card of that set contained three players which were meant to be detached into three individual panels, each less than the size of the early tobacco cards such as T-206. Many players appeared more than once in the set in different combinations, creating considerable confusion whether individual cards were separated or still intact. Needless to say, detached single cards are virtually worthless, even though intended to be that way. Collectors must have breathed a sigh of relief when opening their first pack of 1981-82 basketball cards.

Cards in the 1981-82 set are attractive, especially when compared to the previous year's issue. There are no posed shots, only action shots taken before or during games. Even still poses are game shots, such as Calvin Murphy (card #15) .

The only other design on the front is a brightly colored starburst in the lower left corner with the player's name, position and team in contrasting colors. For a handful of players who changed teams in the summer of 1981, there is a small yellow disc noting the player's new team, such as Scott Wedman (#19), who is with "New Team Cavaliers."

The card backs are, for better or worse, pretty standard for Topps basketball cards of the time, except for the fact that they are printed in yellow and brown. In the upper left corner of the card is a ball going through a basket. The card's number (much more on that later) is inside the ball. The player's name and personal information occupies the top of the card, followed by his professional statistics and a short biography. We are told that Johnny Davis (#16) "possesses amazing jumping ability and quickness." Darryl Dawkins (#29) "is a terror under the boards." Leonard Robinson (#35) is "a powerful inside player." And Jack

Jack is strongest when facing the basket, employing an unorthodox, virtually unstoppable soft, arching jump shot. He led the Supersonics in Scoring last season and had a game-high of 38 Points.

JACK WAS 2-TIME NAIA ALL-AMERICAN AT ILLINOIS WESLEYAN.

Sikma (#39) has "an unorthodox, virtually unstoppable soft, arching jump shot."

On the left side under the basket is a small cartoon, which on many cards is the most entertaining part of the back. Moses Malone (#14) is shown at the head of a conference table because he is "the Chairman of the Boards." Dan Issel (#11) is seen reading a thick history book called "Kentucky History" because he established 23 records there. Likewise, the cartoon of Fred Brown (#43) shows him reading a thick book. His is called "Iona History" because he has the second highest scoring average in that school's history.

INSIDE THE NUMBERS

The numbering system of the 1981-82 basketball set is probably unique in the history of sports cards and difficult to explain briefly. The first 43 cards are straightforward. They are numbered 1-43. Teams appear in alphabetical order, beginning with the Atlanta Hawks and ending with the Washington Bullets. The one exception is the last card, possibly because Topps found itself one player short. Fred Brown is shown and listed as a Seattle Supersonic and, thus, should not be after Washington but between San Diego Clipper Swen Nater (#38) and teammate Jack Sikma (#39).

Most but not all traded players designated as "New Team" are found with their old team. For instance, Otis Birdsong (#17) is located with his former team, the Kings, although he is billed as with "New Team Nets."

Players, too, are in alphabetical order within their teams. For example, the four members of the 1981 NBA champion Boston Celtics are numbered 3-6 and are, in order, Nate Archibald, Larry Bird, Cedric Maxwell and Robert Parrish.

Cards 44-66 are Team Leader cards, again found in alphabetical order from Atlanta to Washington. Players are listed by last name only. So Atlanta's team leaders (#44) are identified only as "*Scoring Drew, *Rebounds Roundfield, *Assists Johnson." The backs of the Team Leader cards are unusual in that they evidently include statistics for every man who played for the team, even for a single game, in the 1980-81 season.

The first 66 cards of the set are usually referred to as the "National" set or subset, although that designation can be found nowhere on the cards. The term was probably developed by collectors to aid in distinguishing it from the other 132 cards in the set.

Those 132 cards are divided into three subsets of 44 cards each. The subsets are designated as "East," "Midwest" and "West" and were distributed (supposedly) only in that area of the country. A team is included in a subset depending, naturally, on its geographic location. And each geographic 44-card subset has its own numbering system, running again in order by home city and player's last name, from #67 to #110 with one of three locations identified. Thus, card East (or E) #67 is Charley Criss of the Atlanta Hawks, card Midwest (or MW) #67 is David Greenwood of the Chicago Bulls, and card West (or W) #67 is T.R. Dunn of the Denver Nuggets.

The players in the regional subsets are those not found in the "National" subset. For example, the Celtics players are numbered E72-E76 and include, again in alphabetical order, M.L. Carr, Chris Ford, Gerald Henderson, Kevin McHale and Rick Robey.

Each regional subset also contains a checklist but they are found in a different position in each subset. The three checklists are E93, MW76 and W97. Each checklist identifies only cards #1-110, naming the 66 national cards and the 44 cards in its regional subset. So a collector on the East Coast was led to believe he had a complete set when he had accrued only 110 cards, unaware of another 88 cards to be found in other parts of the country.

Each of the three regional sets also contains a small number of in-action cards (again in alphabetical order by player's last name) at the end of its run. These "Super Action" cards present a second chance to collect cards of NBA superstars but, again, only those of players found in that particular region. Strangely, the Midwest and West subsets contain only five Super Action cards each while there are no less than 11 East Super Action cards.

The Super Action cards are some of the most attractive cards in the set, especially those of Julius Erving (E104), Dan Roundfield (E110), George Gervin (MW106) and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar (W106).

Unfortunately, a number of the national cards show game scenes with too many players, especially players of the Washington Bullets, in whose home arena most of the photos were shot, making the card's subject seem like just one face in the crowd. A prime example is Darryl Dawkins (#29), lost in a sea of arms and hands. Another is Magic Johnson (#21), pictured while surrounded by three Bullets. However, many of them are fine portraits of the player on the court alone, such as Larry Bird (#4), Calvin Murphy (#15) and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar (#20).

The 1981-82 set is often criticized for its lack of big-name rookies. The most prominent rookies in the set are Kevin McHale (E75), Bill Laimbeer (MW74) and Rick Mahorn (E98). Ironically, while both Laimbeer and Mahorn achieved fame (or infamy) as members of the Detroit Pistons "Bad Boys" of the late 1980s and early '90s, both are shown with different teams, Laimbeer with the Cleveland Cavaliers and Mahorn with the Washington Bullets.

The set does contain the second-year cards of both Magic Johnson and Larry Bird and a second Super Action card of each. While technically not rookie cards they are their first cards in conventional, as opposed to detachable, format and are more desirable than might be expected for second-year cards.

CELTICS

The set contains numerous other Hall of Famers, many of whom are repeated in the Super Action subset. One notable such star is Dennis Johnson, who is #34 in the national subset and W108 in the West Super Action subset. He is significant today as one of the few players to win NBA championships for more than one team. He won his rings as a member of the 1979 Sonics and the 1984 and 1986 Celtics but appears in the 1981-82 set as a Phoenix Sun.

PRICE RANGE

The set was sold retail for 30 cents a pack. Each pack held 13 cards, usually seven national cards and six regional cards. The seven national cards seemed to always include between two and four Team Leader cards. The collating of the regional cards was less than optimal. It was not unusual for an East Coast collector to find a Midwest or West regional card among his East cards.

The wrapper of the packs was undistinguished, showing only a basket and a ball, with an advertisement for one of several Bazooka products on the back.

The set contains one error card. The checklist for the East regional subset is card E93. It can be found numbered as either "East 93" or "West 93." The erroneous West version is evidently scarcer but neither variation is particularly difficult to find or expensive to acquire.

The 1981-82 set was printed on two sheets of 132 cards each. One sheet held two copies of each of the 66 national cards. The other held one copy of each of the 132 regional cards. So each national card is theoretically twice as plentiful as each regional card, although all 198 are often sold as one complete set. I was able to acquire an entire 198-card set for $15 at a card show in 1986.

The set was printed in generous numbers and is still readily available today. Unopened wax packs and boxes are also easy to locate. The entire 198-card set can be found for less than $200 in excellent or near-mint condition. Even stars are relatively inexpensive, going for a few dollars each, unless slabbed and graded in Gem Mint 10. So don't expect to become rich by investing in the 1981-82 Topps Basketball set.

Nevertheless, it is an attractive and collectible set once you have mastered the numbering system. It is a rare opportunity to acquire early cards of all-time greats (Bird, Magic, etc.) for a reasonable sum.

And for Topps collectors, it is historically significant as the final basketball set for a decade to bear that name.

SWEET CEREAL CARDS

Football cards found on the back of 1960s Post cereal boxes were popular with kids and collectors

Kirk Robinson Collection

Sixty years ago, Post Cereals and parent company General Foods ran a big football card promotion designed to encourage sales.

Grocery store managers saw young Baby Boomers tagging along with mom in hopes of convincing her to buy a box of cereal with their favorite player cards on the back. What the kids saw were over-the-wire football pennants and end-aisle stick signs stretching across the storefront. A three-section bin filled with Gravy Train dogfood and another poster on a stick announcing a "Touchdown Special!" of savings had been set up just inside the door.

Not far away was an end-aisle special highlighting Swans Down Cake Mix that came with a free sheet of football cake decorations. Further on, a Tang display featuring Paul Hornung announced that all 14 NFL team photos were available by mail for 50¢ and an inner seal from one of the breakfast drink jars.

Finally came the main attraction — a big setup that included a football trading card sign featuring Johnny Unitas, Hornung and Bill Kilmer promoting "FREE! TRADING CARDS" surrounded by stacks of Post cereal boxes with NFL player cards on the back.

In 1955, Post Cereals teamed with Ted Williams to promote Sugar Crisp by inserting a cloth Major League Baseball team patch in each box. Post ventured back into the sports world in 1960 when it printed "framed" pictures of nine of the top sports stars of the day on the backs of 12- and 16-ounce boxes of Grape Nuts Flakes boxes. The list of players included baseball heroes Mickey Mantle, Eddie Mathews, Don Drysdale, Harmon Killebrew and Al Kaline, hoopsters Bob Petitt and Bob Cousy, and Frank Gifford and Johnny Unitas from the gridiron.

1961 saw Post release its first large-scale card promotion as the company produced a set of 200 MLB players. The cards were designed to be cut out with scissors. There was also an opportunity to get team sheets of "Company" cards through a mail offer on the side of the box. The perforated team cards were attached together as a single unit.

Post upped its baseball presence in 1962 by expanding the number of cereals with cards and followed up in the fall with their only NFL promotion. 1962 was Post's biggest year for sports cards on boxes.

1963 baseball was Post's last effort at producing cards on boxes. They inserted cards into boxes in the 1990s, but the days of box backs with cards produced using rotogravure printing had passed.

Rotogravure printing was accomplished by Post's graphic designers creating 150 percent scale mockups of each box, including the back panel. The group of mockups for each cereal brand and size were then arranged in the way they would be printed. A photograph was made and used to etch six color rotogravure cylinder plates. Each set of plates printed the boxes for one particular cereal.

There were 200 different cards in the Post Cereals football set spread over 12 cereals printed on 99 different packages that resulted in 500 million individual football cards that began hitting grocery store shelves in August 1962.

The twelve cereals were: Alpha-Bits, Bran Flakes, Crispy Critters, Grape Nuts, Grape Nuts Flakes, Oat Flakes, Post Toasties, Raisin Bran, Sugar Crisp, Sugar Coated Corn Flakes, Sugar Coated Rice Krinkles and Top 3. Top 3 was produced only between 1961-63 and was a mixture of Corn Flakes, Wheat Flakes, and Crisp Rice. Post packaged several of its cereals in two single-serving variety packs — Post Tens with 10 boxes and a six-carton Treat-Pak.

Several brands were double printed with other products, meaning that each brand had the same images and configuration of cards on the back panel. Crispy Critters, both the 8- and 13-ounce sizes, had the same back panel as like-sized Alpha-Bits boxes. Another matched pair was Grape Nuts Flakes 12-ounce and Top 3 10-ounce. Post Toasties 12-ounce backs were printed with the same cards on two different style boxes as Post was test marketing a flip-out spout as an alternative to the regular top flap.

The goal of most collectors is to put together a 200-card set. Many also want both the red and black asterisk versions of #57 Jim Ninowski and #74 Sam Baker. While price guides have historically made the asterisk colors of these cards a point of emphasis, it happened simply because the cards were printed on different cereal products and not as a result of error correction. One card art mockup had a black asterisk and the other was red.

If all of the individual cards were cut from each of the 99 panels the result would yield a master set of 528 cards. The key to collecting a master set of individual cards comes from the ability to differentiate the double prints. The process of etching a rotogravure cylinder created a unique plate each time the process occurred, often resulting in printed images with slightly different shades of color. In addition, very small print marks are often found on one brand of a double print but not the other.

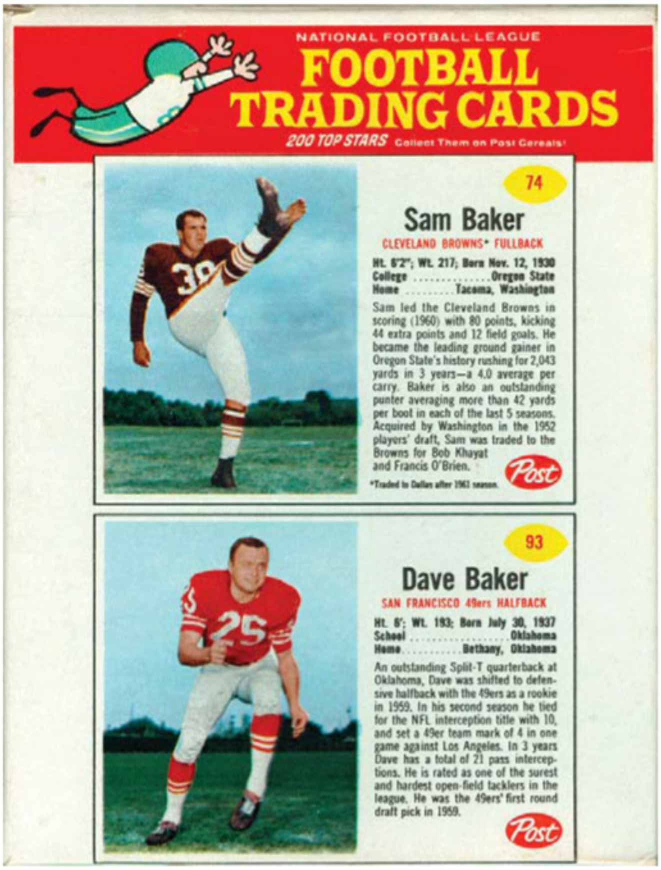
Veteran Post cereal collector Gevert Meyer is credited with the observation that the Crispy Critters yellow football featuring the card number in the upper right corner is darker than their corresponding Alpha-Bits partners. When a print run of cards occurred, the six colors — cyan, yellow, magenta, black, key and clear lacquer — were overlaid on the paper roll one right after another, resulting in full-color images. The key color was chosen based on the main color on the front of the box as Post wanted the correct shade to display when the box was viewed on the shelf. In the case of Crispy Critters, the key color would have been maize and resulted in darker yellows on the numbered football as it was overlaid not only by the yellow plate but also by the key (maize, in this case) plate. Lighting under which a Crispy Critters card is viewed can affect the appearance of the shade of yellow in the football. Also, scanners often inaccurately reflect the proper Crispy Critters yellow hue.

Originally, Post planned to double print Sugar Coated Corn Flakes 10-ounce and Oat Flakes 15-ounce back panels. The rotogravure plates for four different back panels of large Oat Flakes boxes were created and some sample boxes were printed, as demonstrated by the fact that Kraft, who ultimately acquired General Foods and thus Post's assets from 1962, has examples of the Oat Flakes boxes in their archives. There are two known back panels and one complete box of 15-ounce Oat Flakes cards in collections, all three with the same images and seven-card configuration.

None of these samples show adhesive that was used to attach the liner bag on the inside of the box — the back of the card panel. One can reasonably deduct that these panels were rescued from Post's Battle Creek plant without ever being filled with cereal. To date, no individual large size Oat Flakes cards have been found in circulation. It appears that Post did not distribute 15-ounce Oat Flakes boxes with football cards even though the rotogravure plates were created.



Sam Baker

CLEVELAND BROWNS* FULLBACK

Ht. 6'2"; Wt. 217; Born Nov. 12, 1930
College .... Oregon State
Home .... Tacoma, Washington

Sam led the Cleveland Browns in scoring (1960) with 80 points, kicking 44 extra points and 12 field goals. He became the leading ground gainer in Oregon State's history rushing for 2,043 yards in 3 years—a 4.0 average per carry. Baker is also an outstanding punter averaging more than 42 yards per boot in each of the last 5 seasons. Acquired by Washington in the 1952 players' draft, Sam was traded to the Browns for Bob Khayat and Francis O'Brien.

*Traded to Dallas after 1961 season.

Dave Baker

SAN FRANCISCO 49ers HALFBACK

Ht. 6'; Wt. 193; Born July 30, 1937
School .... Oklahoma
Home .... Bethany, Oklahoma

An outstanding Split-T quarterback at Oklahoma, Dave was shifted to defensive halfback with the 49ers as a rookie in 1959. In his second season he tied for the NFL interception title with 10, and set a 49er team mark of 4 in one game against Los Angeles. In 3 years Dave has a total of 21 pass interceptions. He is rated as one of the surest and hardest open-field tacklers in the league. He was the 49ers' first round draft pick in 1959.

Without the production of 15-ounce Oat Flakes boxes, collectors search for 99 uncut panels to have a complete set. Crispy Critters panels are the rarest as newspaper research indicates they were a test product marketed only in western states and Maine in 1962. To date about a half dozen 8-ounce Crispy Critters back panels or complete boxes are known to be in collections. Only a pair of partial uncut 13-ounce Crispy Critters panels have been found — one with five cards plus the header and the other with no header and two connected cards.

Short-print cards are the result of production volume for each cereal. There are a couple dozen tough short-print cards and another 15-20 that arguably could be classified as short prints. Collectors of basic 200-card sets will find #93, Dave Baker, to be the most expensive card to obtain as his two versions were on 10-ounce Oat Flakes and 11-ounce Grape Nuts boxes, both having low production numbers. Card #74, Sam Baker, is on the same two-card Grape Nuts panel as Dave but is easier to find since the other version was from a more well-produced Post Tens bottom tray of three cards.

For master set collectors, any of the 28 Crispy Critters 13-ounce cards are in extremely short supply. They are much more difficult to find than either of the Baker cards. Yet none of the large Crispy Critters cards qualifies as a short print since they are double prints of Alpha-Bits cards. Master set collectors enjoy the hunt for the ultra-rare 13-ounce Crispy Critters cards that can be had for a fraction of the Baker cards.

Many collectors enjoy trying to find as many front-panel "cards" as they can. There were eight different players featured on what are called "ad headers" in a top corner of most of the box fronts and some were cut out and saved. It is possible to collect a master set of 18 ad header player cards. There is also an ad header on Rice Krinkles boxes advertising an Action Toy given away inside those cartons.

The photos for the 1962 Post cereal promotion were taken in 1961 by the duo of Jim Laughead and Brad Bradley of Laughead Photographers of Dallas, Texas. The posed action shots, referred to by Laughead as the "Huck 'n' Buck," are iconic photos of the era. To date 86 of the 200 original production photos reside in collections, with the majority of those owned by a single collector. Laughead and Bradley were contracted again by General Foods in 1962 to shoot the Tang promotion team photos at training camps.

The material used to advertise the promotion is also highly coveted. Displays mentioned previously from grocery store setups include the very rare centerpiece football trading card display with oversized cards of Unitas, Hornung and Kilmer, themselves desirable when detached. Football character stick displays, over-the-wire pennants and "shelf talkers" came as part of the grocery store display kit.

Grocery store giveaway booklets on various topics of football featured Hornung, Jon Arnett, Sonny Jurgensen and Sam Huff. There is a magazine ad and another Hornung ad from the back of a couple of comic books. Swans Down cake decoration sheets are a colorful go-along piece and fairly rare.

Some of the rarest items include press sheets, which were the first few box images printed on the paper roll, cut off and approved for production before a full run of 50,000 feet occurred. Two different Paul Hornung posters exist and only three in total.

There are a couple of known cellophane wrapped Post Tens variety packs with cards visible on the bottom tray and an intact Treat-Pak with two single serving Alpha-Bits boxes that each have a card on the back.

Post also produced a salesman's brochure titled "Touchdown!" along with a merchandising guide that details the advertising material available. The Tang grocery store display featuring Hornung is also extremely difficult to find.

This is just the tip of the iceberg for Post cereal football promotions and only part of the story about why 1962 Post cereal football cards are "The Greatest Set Ever!"

GAR MILLER CARDS

The Longest Continuing Baseball Card Dealer in the Industry

A collector since the age of 10. And a seller since 1970, with an early detailed price list copied, imitated and saved by customers from the early days of the hobby. Publisher of the first "How to Collect Baseball Cards " booklet – complete with a price guide -- in 1973. Today, after more than 52 years, I continue to offer a smorgasbord of quality baseball and football cards, autographs and other memorabilia from the early 1900s to the 1980s. Check my website at www.garmillercards.com and see what you've been missing. Have patience – occasionally a card or cards you've ordered may not still be available – or in the condition listed – but there's plenty to choose from.

Special Nr Mt Complete Set Prices

1978 Topps Baseball - $250
1979 Topps Baseball - $225
1980 Topps baseball - $175 - Add $15 Postage per set
1981 Topps baseball - $70

MAD MAC

Bears legend Jim McMahon talks autographs, collecting and the Super Bowl Shuffle

BY TONY REID

Jim McMahon played high school football in Roy, Utah before starring at Brigham Young.

He initially served as the team's punter while splitting quarterback duties with starter Marc Wilson. Showing flashes of brilliance, he became BYU's main signal caller in 1980.

That 1980 season was a magical one as McMahon set 32 NCAA passing records, including single-season records for total offense, passing yards and touchdown passes.

McMahon had another standout season as a senior in 1981. He was named WAC Player of the Year, a first-team All-American and finished third in Heisman Trophy voting. He won the Davey O'Brien Award and the Sammy Baugh trophy as the nation's top quarterback. Mac left BYU with more than 70 NCAA records and entered the College Football Hall of Fame in 1999.

The legendary Chicago Bears drafted McMahon with the fifth overall pick in the 1982 NFL Draft.

The punky QB wasted no time making an impact on and off the field as his colorful persona was showcased early on. On the field he was named the Bears starter as a rookie and was named to several all-rookie teams as well as NFC Offensive Rookie of the Year.

During his time in The Windy City, McMahon became a media magnet and cultural icon.

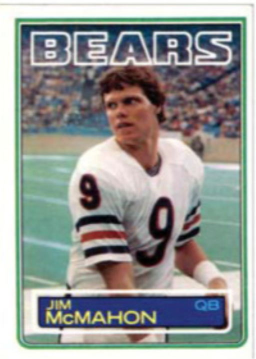
The 1985 Bears put together one of the most dominant seasons in NFL history, winning their first 12 games and finishing the regular season 15-1. McMahon's personality was on full display throughout the dominating playoff run and eventual Super Bowl championship, where the Monsters of the Midway defeated the New England Patriots 46-10 in Super Bowl XX. The Bears Super Bowl team shuffled its way into NFL history.

From a dominating Super Bowl championship, the perfectly styled '80s sunglasses, the personalized headbands and more, Jim McMahon will always be an icon in Chicago.

The two-time Super Bowl champion, NFL Comeback Player of the Year and Pro Bowler spoke to Tony Reid about signing autographs, his own trading cards and behind-the-scenes details about that iconic Super Bowl Shuffle.

You are so beloved in Chicago, what has your relationship been like with the city over the years?

The city has always treated me great. The fans were always good. I get to go back three or four times a year for different events. I lived there for 28 years. It was a big part of my life. I loved Chicago. I just didn't like the weather.



Your rookie card appears in the 1983 Topps set. Do you remember the first time you saw yourself on a trading card?

I don't remember that far back. I thought it was pretty cool that I was finally on one of these things that you have looked at for years growing up.

As a young kid, what athletes inspired you?

My favorite at the time was Joe Namath. I loved Joe Willie. I loved how he played and how he was able to take his persona and go do movies, TV and endorsements. He got to do a lot of different things. I always liked Willie Mays and Mickey Mantle. I liked guys that won.

You have appeared on more than 1,000 different cards. Did you hang on to any cards of yourself over the years?

I still have a few cards in the drawer. I try to keep them. Every once in a while I will see a new one that I haven't seen before. I will throw that in the drawer as well. I will hang on to those. I have grandkids now. Hopefully they will enjoy them.

The 1985 Chicago Bears might be the single most iconic team in sports history. You recently posted a picture of the gold record you have from the Super Bowl Shuffle song and video. What was the overall Super Bowl Shuffle experience like for you?

When it was brought to us halfway through the season in 1985, it was supposed to be a record deal. They said the proceeds would go to feed the homeless on Thanksgiving and Christmas. We thought that was a good thing for the city of Chicago. We all agreed to do a record. That was the contract. We did our part in the studio and a couple of weeks later — it was Willie Gault and his friend in the record business — they came to us and said we needed to do a music video now. We said that wasn't the deal. They said when you make a record now you have to make a video. I said that wasn't the deal. Walter Payton and I both said we weren't going to do a video.

They ended up taping the video the day after our only loss that year, the day after we lost to Miami. We got home from Miami about 3 a.m. The guy said to be at the studio at 8 a.m. They were recording for about eight hours. Walter and I didn't go. We told them that wasn't a part of the deal. About a week later they came to us right before practice and said that if we didn't do our part we were going to get sued. So, what you saw, Walter and I had to do our part after practice at the racquetball courts in Halas Hall. What you saw up there was a pissed-off white man who had to do something that wasn't in the contract.

From the Adidas headbands to the Rozelle headbands, the iconic shades and more, did you manage to hold on to any of those great items that collectors would love to get their hands on today?

I still have a little bit of memorabilia. I don't have any of the Super Bowl headbands. I still have some jerseys. I still have the shoes I wore in the Super Bowl. Other than that, I have a lot of pictures and jerseys of the friends I played with. I still have the Super Bowl trophies that I keep in the office. I had a mancave before I moved.

As a lifelong Bears fan, I would love to hear what the mancave looked like.

It was basically my office. It had everything related to football in it. I probably had more stuff related to the military than I do football. My Super Bowl trophies were there. I had some of the college awards I won in there, too. I had a bunch of framed jerseys from Chicago. I had jerseys of Jay Hilgenberg, Jim Covert, I had Gale Sayers and Dick Butkus. I had Reggie White in there. I have a Lance Alworth. I don't know how I got it.

MAD MAC
THE GRID WARRIOR

Some of the most iconic collectibles you are featured on are the Costacos Brothers posters. The Mad Mac poster and the Chicago Vice poster with Walter are classics. They are now coming back as NFT releases. What are your memories from the photo shoots that led to those great images?

It was a pretty cool idea that the Costacos Brothers came up with. I had a good time shooting the posters. They are actually going to re-release those again. I am looking forward to seeing those again.

To be standing there in that gear at the photo shoot, what was going through your mind? Were you just trusting the process?

We had a live bear on the set for the photo shoot. The live bear cub had pretty long claws. He was pretty good. We had to keep grapes handy to keep him settled down. He figured out that I kept the grapes in the shoes that were hanging off my hip. He was clawing up my leg to get to those damn grapes. We had to hurry up the shoot.

The back of your 1988 Topps card states that you won 28 of your last 29 starts and that you hadn't lost at Soldier Field since Sept. 30 of 1984. What was it like playing and living through that incredible dominance?

The only one I remember is the one we lost. That was the NFC Championship game. We played in three NFC Championship games in five years and only won one of them. That was unfortunate for that team.

As far as fan interaction, do you still get mobbed by people and get fan mail today?

Yeah I get a few things every day in the mail. When I am back in Chicago people still recognize me. I try to get to as many as I can. Back in the day there was no way to keep up. Now, if I'm sitting there doing my bills and there are a few in there we will get it taken care of.

Leading up to the Super Bowl, the Chicago Tribune said you had "Muhammad Ali-like fan worship." What was it like walking around as Mad Mac during the craziness of the 1985 Bears?

It was a pain in the ass. You couldn't go anywhere, especially when I was with my family and my kids. My kids got run over I don't know how many times. It was more of a distraction. I couldn't go anywhere or take the kids anywhere. It wasn't a whole lot of fun. It's nice to be recognized but to be constantly hounded is not too much fun.

The jersey swap has become a tradition across sports now. If you could go back to your playing days, who would you want to ask for a jersey?

I never did swap jerseys. I got to play against Ken Stabler. That would have been a good jersey to get. We were all pretty much friends — Marino, Elway, all the guys of my era. They would be good jerseys to have as well.
